

Praise for Notre Dame

Monday, September 19, 2005

Notre Dame Regional High School in Cape Girardeau has been ranked among the top 50 Catholic high schools in the nation this year.

The rating comes from the Acton Institute for the Study of Religion & Liberty, a Grand Rapids, Mich., educational and research organization dedicated to promoting "a free and virtuous society."

The Acton Institute is named for Lord Acton, a British historian best known for the observation: "Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely."

The school received high marks for its Catholic identity, academic excellence and civic pride.

Notre Dame students, faculty, parents, alumni and supporters can take great pride in this national recognition.
